WHY WAS THE COUNTY BOSS SLIGHTED?

The hearing at Hartford, Thursday before the Judiciary committee, on the Bridgeport City Court contest, did not develop any points not generally known here, though fresh information of value to the committee was perhaps produced.

It was known that the contest is between the "Olds" and the "Youngs." with reputable men as candidates upon both slates; that the "Olds" number among their members most of the men conspicuous these many years in the "machine" which generally rules the local Republican party; that the legal profession is divided upon the question and that respected citizens are found in each faction.

Mayor Lee who appeared for the "Olds." was met by the fact that he owes his nomination to the self-sacrificing spirit of a leading member of the "Youngs," and it might have been added that, had the "Youngs" bolted the nomination, his election would have been most gravely endangered. His present position carries the appearance of gross ingratitude.

name from the list of speakers for the slate of the "Olds" is a surprise. Surely he had earned the right to appear thus conspicuously. Did he not make that "Macedonian cry for help" by telegraph to Senator Brandegee, to which the latter responded with a virtual order to the Judiciary committee to await his pleasure? As the Senator was held by pressure of official business in Washington and could not appear personally, should not the managing "Olds" have placed the sheriff on the speaking list and thus permitted Mr. Brandegee to appear by proxy? ty Republicanism, and is not Bridgeport a part of the county, with the conduct of its affairs thus within his Jurisdiction?

But the contest is now in the committee's hands, even though the record is importantly incomplete as above indicated, and its decision will be awaited with the usual interest attaching to local factional contests.

State Treasurer Patten favors reimposition of the State tax upon the towns, which has been non-existent since 1890. Before the Farmers' association which is composed of members of the General Assembly from the country towns and which can, acting unitedly, control the House, he stated that 27 towns would pay 75 per cent. of the tax-that is, that the cities and larger boroughs would carry nearly the entire burden. Desiring reimposition of the tax, Treasurer Patten showed excellent judgment in placing such an argument before such a body; also, in refraining from mentioning the further fact that while most of the cities clergyman replied that she was a Flint, make full-value assessments, probably and all the Skinflints of Boston were a majority of the rural towns continue the old practice of half to two-thirds value assessments, which permits them to dodge materially on county taxation and would operate similarly in connection with a State tax. If full-value assessments, as required by law, could be enforced, there would be slight objection to a State tax if needed; under existing conditions, it would operate very unequally.

Indefinite postponement of hearings upon the pending public utilities bills carries an ominous look. It probably called forth Gov. Lilley's special message urging early action. During the campaign, the Farmer, noting the considerable number of legislative nominees connected with public utility corporations, suggested that these corporations were quietly engaged in packing one or both branches of the food fermentation. It sweetens the General Assembly against the creation of a properly constructed and properly endowed public utilities commission. impurities to arise. founded. A Good Concert—Two Opperettas—An Supper—A New Baker's Route.

What Rev. Dr. Child calls the best concert ever given in the Congregational church was enjoyed last evening by an audience which crowded the Sunday school room and overflowed into the church parlor. The program opened with the "Prison Song" from the opera of Il Trovatore by Prof. Swan of the Hargrove school which he played in a masterly manner upon the piano. For an encore he gave the Shadow act from Lenora. The next number was the rendering of the bridal chorus by the Choral Society of the church, under the leadership of Prof. Snead of Yale. This chorus is composed of a score or more of young ladies and gentlemen who attend the church. Mr. Snead followed with a solo, and for an encore gave a song called "Going Down to Rio." He possesses a strong bass voice and sings with great force and expression. The The omission of Sheriff Hawley's 4th number of the program was an operetta by the choir of the church, an amusing work founded upon the nursery rhyme:

> "Little Jack Horner sat in a corner, Eating a Christmas pie, He put in this thumb, pulled out a plum And said: What a good boy am I.'

The singing was very sweet and

There were many anxious people in the parish who watched the peculiar symptoms which the clergyman exhibited. He was constantly talking about ancestors, and hunting for family records. The post master noticed that he corresponded with many learned societies abroad such as the Genealogical and the Heraldry Office; he attended all the family reunions he could hear of; he haunted the Town Hall and poured over dusty records until his clothes became dusty, some said with the dust of ages. He picked up the odds and ends of ancient tomes; bent over in his walk; and had often been heard walking his room late at night, and more than once a big book had been heard to tumble down as late as four o'clock in the morning. He boarded with Mrs. Purple, and she noticed that he was losing his appetite and no matter what delicacies were set before him, he did not seem to care for them. Sometimes he would receive as many as ten letters a day, from all parts of the country, and Mrs. Purple said that some of them contained as many as 17 questions about the writer's ancestors. One letter came from a lady who wished to know who her mother was. Mr. Gray, the descended from her. At another time
